FROM HIS OLD KENTUCKY HOME

Harry Robinson Tells of His Run for State Senate.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11, 1907.

Editor Advertiser: Some time since you were kind enough to mention my candidacy for State Senator in Kentucky, and I know you at all times take an interest in those who have been residents of Honolulu, and thinking you might like to know the exact state of affairs here at the present time, I am sending you the following item:

Never since the Civil War, now about forty-five years past, have the Republicans had so exclusive control of the State as at the present day.
True, about seven years ago, Kentucky went Republican as far as the governorship was concerned, at which time the lamentable assassination of William Goebel, the Democratic aspirant, occurred.

While his killing was one of the most dastardly and foul ever perpetrated in a civilized community, he was unquestionably beaten by a man named Taylor, but Goebel and his friends went to our State capital in an endeavor to steal the election. At this time hordes of our mountaineers, who have gone so far toward giving Kentucky a black name in the civilized world, collected in Frankfort and Goebel was shot in the back presumably from some window in the courthouse, where Taylor, the Republican Governor-elect, and his army of mountaineers were collected.

During the confusion, Taylor fled to Indiana where he is now, and two Republican governors of Indiana have refused to allow him to be brought back to Kentucky, although he was indicted for having a part in the assassination of Goebel.

Three men were caught and indicted as participants in the crime. One, Henry E. Youtsey, was convicted and sentenced for life; another, Jim Howard, a mountaineer, was also given a life sentence; and the other, Caleb Powers, has been tried three times.
The first two trials resulted in a verdict for life and the last, about two years ago, in conviction of murder in the first degree and sentence to be hanged. In each case, however, he secured a new trial and his fourth trial begins today.

The Legislature at that time being overwhelmingly Democratic, declared J. C. B. Beckham who ran with Goebel as Lieutenant Governor, as the Governor of Kentucky, who filled out his unexpired term and was again elected Governor. Of him I will speak later.

Since the time of Goebel's assassination, Kentucky has always been Democratic, and while many predicted a very close race in the city of Louisville as well as in the State, the most sanguine Republican never dreamed of such a landslide as struck the Democrats last Tuesday, and I happened to be one of their number.

The Republican Mayor and every single Republican candidate in the city of Louisville was elected with the exception of one Democrat for the Legislature, and the city in the Governor and Mayor's race went about five thousand Republican, when we have generally counted on ten thousand Democratic. I was fortunate enough to run about thirty-three and one-third per cent ahead of my ticket, but was nevertheless defeated, and Wilson, Republican, against Hager, Democrat, for Governor, carried the State by about eighteen thousand majority.

In 1906, J. C. W. Beckham, who was then as now our Governor, worked up a snap primary for the United States Senator against McCreary, one of our present senators, whose term will shortly expire.

McCreary is greatly beloved by everybody in Kentucky and has a most enviable record in Washington; nevertheless Beckham, holding the whip handle over the Democratic party in Kentucky, worked it so dexterously as to gain a small vote over McCreary and had himself declared the Democratic nominee for United States Senator, but in doing this with many other acts, in which he was loudly condemned by both Republicans and Democrats, he created great discord in the State, and to him alone our overwhelming defeat is largely due as many of our best known Democrats here in Louisville voted the straight Republican ticket in an effort to beat him.

In this I believe they have been thoroughly successful. True, we have many hold-overs in the Senate and House, but the majority of these are extremely bitter toward Beckham, as well as a few new senators and representatives who were elected a few days since, and it appears now that Beckham will be disastrously defeated when the two houses meet in January, as the Democratic members claim that they will not be bound by what they allege was a fake primary, and shall vote for a man of their choice, and while great changes may occur before they meet, they seem practically united on Senator McCreary.

The Republicans will not have enough in either house to elect a Republican Senator and it is believed that many of them will unite, if necessary, in electing McCreary over Beckham, and the Democrats feeling much aggrieved over many things that Beckham has done to advance his own interest and to the detriment of his party, will be only too glad to see him sent back to political oblivion.

While I regret, of course, the defeat of the Democratic party, and especially in the city of Louisville, I cannot speak too highly of the Republican ticket, which is composed of many of our very best citizens who will give us a good, honest government.

The great wave of reform and especially that of closing the saloons and gambling dens, struck us some time ago and the Republicans have pledged themselves to keep the lid on tight in Louisville, as well as in other cities.

Whether this will tend to advance Louisville's commercial interests, I am not prepared at the present time to say, but, as you doubtless know, our State is the home of liquor industries and it appears to me somewhat probable, if the lid is put on as they claim it will be, that our commercial interests will suffer to some extent.

It may surprise you to know that in our State, where more whiskey is produced than any other ten States in the Union, we have one hundred and nineteen counties of which one hundred and five are now prohibition, and the prohibition wave seems to be gradually covering the entire United States.

As you know, Louisville has always been my home and I have many friends here and have worked up a nice practice, but I can never forget the happiest days of my life which were spent in Honolulu, or cease the longing I have always felt to return there, which has been prevented only by a force of circumstances and a sense of duty over which I have no control.

If you care to use them, I will be glad to send you from time to time little items that might interest the Honolulu people, of which I shall always be proud of being and having been one.

With kindest regards, and wishing you every success, believe me, Sincerely your friend,
HARRY W. ROBINSON.

FAIR HARVARD'S 300TH ANNIVERSARY

Today is the 300th anniversary of the birth of John Harvard, the founder of Harvard University. As such the occasion is being appropriately observed by Harvard men all over the United States. In Cambridge the Harvard Memorial Society holds a banquet in Memorial Hall with speaking by various distinguished men. On Saturday night the undergraduates of the college are to have special demonstrations, concluding with a huge bonfire in the stadium on Soldiers' Field.

Locally the day will be observed by the Harvard Club of Hawaii which meets tonight on the beach at Waikiki, where there will also be a bonfire.

In connection with the celebration the following statement about John Harvard may not be out of place. Harvard College was founded in 1636 by a vote passed by the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts. In 1638 John Harvard, a non-conformist clergyman, who had been in the Colony about a year, died at Charlestown, leaving one-half of his property, and his entire library (about 300 volumes) to the new institution. The value of the estate was more than double the entire sum voted by the General Court, and it was resolved to open the college at once and to give it the name of "Harvard." The first-class was formed in the same year and graduated in 1642.

All knowledge of the birth and early life of John Harvard was lost for many years, but through the researches of Mr.
Henry Fitz Waters, an eminent American genealogist, it is now known that John Harvard was born on November 26, 1607, at Stratford-on-Avon. He was the son of Robert and Katherine Rogers Harvard. Very recently John Harvard's birthplace has, through the generosity of Mr. Edward Morris of Chicago, been restored and given to Harvard University. This house belonged to John Harvard's mother. It is one of the best examples extant of the domestic architecture of its time.
Its permanent maintenance in its restored form will make it one of the interesting features of Stratford and will add another link to the chain that is drawing together the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family.

What the Kidneys Do

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood.
They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

W. J. Maxwell, of Honolulu, writes thus: "I suffered with a horrible pain in the small of my back (an almost invariable symptom of kidney trouble) for a number of years. I was advised to take some of Doan's Backache Kidney Pills, and following the suggestion I went to the Hollister Drug Co.'s store, Fort street, and got some of these.
Having taken them, they relieved me straight away, and are, I may say, the best and in fact the only cure for backache. I have mentioned the virtue of this wonderful remedy to several persons, among whom is a friend, who found relief, and is now a firm believer in Doan's Backache Kidney Pills."

Doan's Backache Kidney Pills are sold by all chemists and storekeepers at 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, or will be mailed on receipt of price by the Hollister Drug Co., Honolulu, wholesale agents for the Hawaiian Islands.
